

Dear Fiona Caithness,

I hope you are having a good week.

I am writing to express my strong interest in joining the British Society for Geomorphology (BSG) Executive Committee. After reviewing the available roles, I would like to submit my application for the positions of Research Secretary and Vice Chair (Publications and Communications).

As a Geoinformatics researcher with an academic background in Geography and an M.Sc. in Geoinformatics, I am deeply committed to the advancement of geomorphological research.

I am particularly drawn to the Research Secretary and Vice Chair (Publications and Communications) roles. My background in Avalanche hazard modelling and Glacier Geomorphology and my experience as a scientific content creator feel like a great fit for the diverse responsibilities of these positions. I am genuinely excited about the possibility of helping coordinate research initiatives or supporting the Society communications and outreach.

I have attached my CV to this email. I would appreciate the chance to chat more about how I could support the committee and learn more about these roles.

Thanks so much for your time and help!

Best regards,
